

America has a drug problem...

it's called the War on Drugs.

Every year, billions of dollars are spent trying to stop the drug trade, yet drugs are more prevalent on our streets than ever.

Every day, drug addicts are unable to find treatment, yet our prisons are overcrowded with non-violent drug offenders.

And every 18 seconds, another American is arrested on drug charges. Yet, we are still unable to win the War on Drugs.

America is fighting an unwinnable Drug War.

SSDP is fighting back.

Students for Sensible Drug Policy is a strong grassroots network of students around the country committed to ending the failed War on Drugs.

We envision a society that values personal choice, while also providing help to those who develop drug problems.

That society is within reach, but only with your help. Become part of a growing movement. Change harmful drug laws while meeting activists at your school and around the country.
